Regulations and System of Ethics of the Medical Association of the District of Columbia.

ADOPTED MAY 9, 1899.

REGULATIONS.

ARTICLE I.

Name.

This Association shall be known as the Medical Association of the District of Columbia.

ARTICLE II.

Ethics.

The code of ethics of the American Medical Association shall be the code of ethics of this Association, and its requirements shall be binding upon the members.

ARTICLE III.

Membership.

Section 1. The membership of this Association shall be limited to legally qualified regular practitioners of medicine residing in the District of Columbia and who are engaged in no other occupation.

SEC. 2. Should any one elected to membership subsequently accept a government clerkship or engage in any business or occupation not connected with the regular practice of medicine, his connection with this Association shall cease immediately.

SEC. 3. The existing Associate members shall be entitled to consultations, but to no other privilege of the Association.

ARTICLE IV.

Applications for Membership.

All applications for membership shall be made on blank forms adopted by the Association, and addressed to the Secretary, who shall read them, at the first stated meeting following their reception, and immediately forward the same to the Board of Censors, for their investigation, for report at the next stated meeting.

ARTICLE V.

Officers.

The Officers of this Association shall be a President, two Vice-Presidents, a Secretary, a Treasurer, nine Counselors and three Censors.

ARTICLE VI.

Duty of Officers.

Section 1. The President shall preside at all meetings of the Association. He shall call special meetings when requested in writing, by the Standing Committee, or any three members of the Association. He shall appoint all special committees, unless otherwise ordered by the Association, and an auditing committee to audit the accounts of the Treasurer. He shall sign all contracts and indorse all vouchers when authorized by the Association. During his absence one of the Vice-Presidents shall perform the duties of the President; and in the absence of these officers a temporary chairman shall be chosen from the members present.

Duties of the Secretary.

SEC. 2. (a) The Secretary shall keep a record of the proceedings and conduct all correspondence of the Association. He shall give notice, by order of the President, of all stated and special meetings by postal-card or circular, to each member, at least four days previous to the meetings; notify officers and members of their election, calling special attention of the latter to the necessity of their signing the regulations as provided in Article VII, Sec. 2. He shall furnish to each member a printed list of applicants for membership two weeks prior to the stated meeting, at which their applications are to be voted upon; he shall notify members of their election, by the Association or the Standing Committee, as delegates to the American Medical Association, and direct them to notify him within ten days of their acceptance or non-acceptance. He shall, in case a delegate is unable to serve, or fails to accept within the time specified, notify the Standing Committee of such fact. He shall issue a credential to each delegate who accepts as herein required, but to none other. He shall furnish annually, on or about May 1st, to each member a printed roster of the Officers and Members of the Association, with their addresses.

(b) At the stated meetings he shall read all applications for membership, and forward them promptly to the Board of Censors, keeping a record of the same. He shall immediately notify each member of the Association by circular note whenever a member is dropped for non-payment of dues, or expelled from the Association.

Duties of the Treasurer.

SEC. 3. The Treasurer shall have charge of the funds, collect all assessments, and disburse the same by direction of the Association, on vouchers indorsed by the President. He shall render at each stated meeting an account of the funds received, with the vouchers for his disbursements, which shall be audited semi-annually by a Committee, appointed by the President. He shall promptly report all delinquent members to the Secretary.

Duties of the Counselors.

Sec. 4. (a) The Counselors shall constitute a Standing Committee to consider and decide all matters which concern the honor and interest of the Association; they shall make such rules for their guidance as they may deem proper, and shall select a chairman and secretary from their number. They shall request the President, in writing, to call special meetings of the Association whenever they consider it necessary.

- (b) They shall investigate all infringements or violations of the ethics of the Association which may come to their knowledge, but investigations of alleged violations shall be made only upon written charges, submitted to this Committee by one or more members of the Association. The charges must be specific, giving the name of the offending party or parties and of those cognizant of the alleged facts. The committee shall then proceed to investigate the accusation and collect the testimony of the witnesses whose names have been furnished, and such other information as may be deemed necessary.
- (c) The Committee shall have authority to summon and examine members, and in the event of their failure or refusal to appear or to give evidence, the Committee shall report such failure or refusal, to the Association, for such action as that body may deem just and proper.
- (d) Should the Standing Committee, by vote of twothirds, find any member or members guilty of a violation of the regulations and ethics, they shall request the President to call, immediately, a special meeting of the Association, to which they shall report their decision with the facts and evidence adduced, all of which shall be read in open meeting. Should their decision be confirmed by a two-thirds vote of the members present, at an adjourned meeting, which shall be held within ten days thereafter, the member or members found guilty shall, on motion, receive such punishment as may be determined by a two-thirds vote of the members present.

- (e) The Standing Committee shall have power to adjust minor complaints and differences between members, without reporting to the Association, but in all such cases an appeal may be made to the Association from the decision of the Committee, by one or more of the parties concerned.
- (f) The Standing Committee shall assess equally upon all the members, the amount required for the contingent expenses of the Association, but the amount of such assessment, in no one year, shall exceed the sum of two dollars.
- (g) The Standing Committee shall fill all vacancies occurring among the delegates to the American Medical Association and promptly certify to the Secretary of this Association the names of those so elected.
- (h) The Standing Committee shall keep full records of its proceedings, and shall submit the same to the Association, at any meeting, if directed to do so by a majority of the members present.
- (i) Meetings of this Committee shall be called at the discretion of its chairman or when he is requested to do so by two of its members.

Duties of the Board of Censors.

SEC. 5. The Censors shall inquire into the qualifications of all applicants for membership and report to the Association, at a stated meeting, the results of their investigations.

ARTICLE VII.

Elections.

Section 1. The Officers of this Association shall be elected by ballot at the stated meeting in April of each year, by a majority of the members present, but any vacancy shall be filled at the first meeting following its occurrence.

Sec. 2. Applicants for membership shall be proposed at one stated meeting and voted on by ballot at the next stated meeting, after they have been reported upon by the Board of Censors, and upon a favorable vote of two-thirds of the members present, the applicants shall be admitted to membership; Provided, They sign the obligation of the regulations and system of ethics within thirty days thereafter.

SEC. 3. The delegates to the American Medical Association shall be nominated and elected at the stated meeting in April, or at an adjourned meeting held within ten days thereafter. The delegates elected shall signify in writing to the Secretary of this Association, within ten days, their acceptance and their determination to serve.

SEC. 4. In ease of declination or failure of delegates to accept, the Secretary shall notify the Standing Committee, and thereupon the said Committee shall fill such vacancies and certify to the Secretary the names of those selected.

ARTICLE VIII.

Quorum.

Section 1. Twenty members shall constitute a quorum at any stated, adjourned or special meeting of the Association.

Sec. 2. Five members shall constitute a quorum at any meeting of the Standing Committee.

Sec. 3. A majority of its members shall constitute a quorum at the meeting of any special committee.

ARTICLE IX.

Meetings—Stated and Special.

Section 1. This Association shall hold stated meetings on the first Tuesdays of April and October of each year, at 8 o'clock P. M., at such place within the District of Columbia as may be designated by the President or by vote of the Association.

SEC. 2. Special meetings shall be called by the President when requested in writing by the Standing Committee or any three members of the Association.

ARTICLE X.

Order of Business.

- 1. Call to Order.
- 2. Reading of minutes of the previous meeting.
- 3. Unfinished business.
- 4. Report of Censors, and Election of Applicants for membership. At stated meetings.
- 5. Report of Treasurer at stated meetings.
- 6. Reports of Committees.
- 7. Election of Officers and of Delegates to the American Medical Association at the stated meeting in April.
- 8. Miscellaneous Business.
- 9. Adjournment.

ARTICLE XI.

Duties of Members.

SECTION 1. It shall be the duty of every member who becomes acquainted with any breach of the regulations and ethics of this Association, to make the fact known to the Standing Committee, who shall inquire into the same.

SEC. 2. In certificates of illness concerning absence from official duties given to employees in the public service, or others, the disease shall not be specified, neither shall the name or nature of the disease be divulged by any written description or statement of symptoms, given to the patient, nor by any specification of the disorder, nor by any disclosure which may be construed as an evasion of the purpose of this regulation.

SEC. 3. It shall be the duty of members of this Association to discourage patients from defrauding other members, and it is expected that the members will use all just and proper means to assist each other in the collection of their fees for professional services.

- SEC. 4. No member of this Association shall consult in private or hospital practice, with any resident practitioner in this District who is not a member thereof, or whose application for membership has not been filed with the Secretary, or who has been dropped from membership, or declined admission; but this regulation shall not apply to medical officers of the Army, Navy or Marine Hospital Service of the United States, or to Associate members, or to legalized practitioners of African descent, or to legalized practitioners from other States, who may be called to attend cases in this District, provided their practice conforms to the ethics of the American Medical Association.
- SEC. 5. While the privilege of selecting the consulting physician is conceded to the patient or his immediate family, nevertheless, as the good of the patient is the sole object in view, it shall be allowable for the attending physician to express his preference.
- SEC. 6. No member of this Association who has been called in as consulting physician, in a medical or surgical case, shall assume sole charge of the patient, during the same illness, unless he shall have been specifically requested to do so by the attending physician.

ARTICLE XII.

SEC. 2. The foregoing table contains the standard fees which shall be demanded; they shall be increased, according to the judgment of the practitioner concerned, in all cases of extraordinary detention or attendance; also in proportion to the importance of the cases, of the responsibility attached to it, and to the services rendered, when these are extraordinary. They shall be diminished at the discretion of the physician when he believes that the patient can not afford to pay the regular fees, and yet is able to make some compensation, but diminishing the fees, except for motives of charity and benevolence, is a violation of this regulation.

SEC. 3. Medical officers connected with the staffs of the hospitals and dispensaries in the District of Columbia shall charge the usual fees for medical services rendered to persons who seek gratuitous services when they are able to pay.

Sec. 4. Clergymen are not entitled to gratuitous services except when they are in indigent circumstances.

Graduates of medicine are not entitled to gratuitous services unless they devote their entire time to the practice of medicine or by reason of age or infirmity have retired from the regular practice of medicine, or unless such graduates of medicine, like other individuals, are in indigent circumstances.

SEC. 5. It is not designed by these regulations to prevent gratuitous services to those who are incapable of making remuneration without distressing themselves or families.

SEC. 6. When a physician engaged to attend a case of obstetrics is absent, and a second attends the patient, the latter may charge the full fee, but shall relinquish the patient to the first on his return; and in no case shall the second continue to attend, except to render indispensable service during the continued absence or disability of the first.

SEC. 7. When one or more physicians are called in consultation the attending and consulting physician or physicians shall charge at least the ordinary fee for delivery or other services; but when the latter is not detained in attendance he shall only charge the usual fee for consultation.

SEC. 8. It is recommended that the members of this Association present their accounts for professional services at the close of the attendance; and it shall be the duty of each member to obtain, if possible, a settlement from all his patients at least once in three months, viz: the first of January, the first of April, the first of July and the first of October.

SEC. 9. No member of this Association shall make a contract, expressed or implied, to attend an individual or family by the year, or on any terms other than those authorized by these regulations.

ARTICLE XIII.

Hospitals and their Medical Staffs.

Section 1. Every institution for medical charity shall require from every applicant for relief in its Hospital or Dispensary, a written certificate, to be obtained as hereinafter provided, that said applicant is unable to pay. Emergency cases are to be excepted from the operation of this rule.

SEC. 2. Such certificate shall be obtained from Physicians to the Poor, the Associated Charities, or any registered physician.

SEC. 3. Sick and injured persons found upon the streets, in the stations or elsewhere, who require immediate treatment, shall be carried to the Emergency Hospital, or the nearest Hospital having an Emergency Service, or to their homes, if so directed by the patient or his friends.

SEC. 4. Emergency patients shall not be detained longer in such Institutions than the necessity of the case imperatively demands, but shall be discharged from the service and sent to their homes or to some public hospital as the patient may elect.

- SEC. 5. Members of this Association shall be entitled to the privilege of attending private patients occupying private rooms in any of the public hospitals of this city.
- SEC. 6. The members of the Medical Staff of Hospitals when attending medical or surgical cases in private payrooms shall insist upon proper payment for their services except in the case of such patients as are clearly unable to pay.
- SEC. 7. Whenever the Medical Staff of a Hospital or Dispensary, or any member thereof, is forced to resign, and when, after due hearing, this Association finds that the resignations were for unjust and insufficient cause, it shall be forbidden for any member of this Association to accept a position on the Staff of said Hospital or Dispensary.
- SEC. S. Whenever one or more members of the Medical Staff of a Hospital or Dispensary are dismissed, and when, after due investigation, this Association finds that such dismissal was without just and sufficient cause, it shall be forbidden for any member of this Association to fill the vacancy created thereby.
- SEC. 9. Complaints made under Secs. 7 and 8 of this article shall be made in writing to the Standing Committee, which after due consideration shall report its findings to the Association.

ARTICLE XIV.

Resignations.

Resignations of membership or office shall be made in writing to the President, by whom they shall be presented to the Association, for its action, at the first succeeding meeting.

ARTICLE XV.

Expulsions.

SECTION 1. Any member may be expelled for violation of these regulations and ethics when, after due trial and conviction by the Standing Committee, such conviction and punishment is approved by a two-thirds vote of the Association, at an adjourned meeting, in accordance with Article VI, Sec. 4 (d).

SEC. 2. In case any member shall neglect or refuse to pay an annual assessment for two years, his connection with this Association shall thereupon cease.

ARTICLE XVI.

Seniority.

Members shall rank in seniority according to the order in which they have affixed their names to the regulations and system of ethics.

ARTICLE XVII.

Obligation.

Each physician elected to membership shall sign the following obligation of this Association within thirty days thereafter, as provided in Article VII, Sec. 2, viz.:

"I approve of the Regulations and System of Medical Ethics adopted by the Medical Association of the District of Columbia and agree, on my honor, to comply with the same."

ARTICLE XVIII.

Amendments.

All propositions for repealing, altering, or amending these regulations shall be presented in writing at a stated meeting, and be acted upon at an adjourned meeting, which shall not be held for that purpose sooner than one month from the date of offering such proposition, a copy of such amendments proposed being sent to each member with the notice of the meeting, and it shall require the concurrence of two-thirds of the members present for its adoption.

CODE OF MEDICAL ETHICS

OF THE DUTIES OF PHYSICIANS TO THEIR PATIENTS, AND OF THE OBLIGATIONS OF PATIENTS TO THEIR PHYSICIANS.

ARTICLE I.—Duties of Physicians to their Patients.

1. A physician should not only be ever ready to obey the calls of the sick, but his mind ought also to be imbued with the greatness of his mission, and the responsibility he habitually incurs in its discharge. These obligations are the more deep and enduring, because there is no tribunal other than his own conscience to adjudge penalties for carelessness or neglect. Physicians should, therefore, minister to the sick with due impressions of the importance of their office; reflecting that the ease, the health and the lives of those committed to their charge, depend on their skill, attention and fidelity. They should study, also, in their deportment, so to unite lenderness with firmness, and condescension with authority, as to inspire the minds of their patients with gratitude, respect and confidence.

1/2. Every case committed to the charge of a physician should be 2. Every case committed to the charge of a physician should be treated with attention, steadiness and humanity. Reasonable indulgence should be granted to the mental imbedility and caprices of the sick. Secrecy and delicacy, when required by peculiar circumstances, should be strictly observed; and the familiar and confidential intercourse to which physicians are admitted in their professional visits, should be used with discretion, and with the most scrupulous regard and fidelity and honor. The obligation of secrecy extends beyond the period of professional services; none of the privacies of personal and domestic life, no infirmity of disposition or flaw of character observed during professional attendance should ever be divulged by the physician except when he is imperatively required to do so. The force and necessity of this obligation are indeed so great, that professional men have, under certain circumstances, been protected in their observance of secrecy by courts of justice.

% 3. Frequent visits to the sick are in general requisite, since they enable the physician to arrive at a more perfect knowledge of the disease—to meet promptly every change which may occur, and also tend to preserve the confidence of the patient. But unnecessary visits are to be avoided, as they give useless anxiety to the patient, tend to diminish the authority of the physician, and render him liable to be suspected of interested motives.

₹ 5. A physician ought not to abandon a patient because the case is deemed incurable; for his attendance may continue to be highly useful to the patient, and comforting to the relatives around him, even in the last period of a fatal malady, by alleviating pain and other symptoms, and by soothing mental anguish. To decline attendance, under such circumstances, would be sacrificing to fanciful delicacy and mistaken liberality, that moral duty which is independent of, and superior to, all pecuniary consideration.

⟨ 6. Consultations should be promoted in difficult or protracted cases, as they give rise to confidence, energy and more enlarged views in practice.

% 7. The opportunity which a physician not unfrequently enjoys of promoting and strengthening the good resolutions of his patients, suffering under the consequences of vicious conduct, ought never to be neglected. His counsels, or even remonstrances, will give satisfaction, not offense, if they be proffered with politeness, and evince a genuine love of virtue, accompanied by a sincere interest in the welfare of the person to whom they are addressed.

Art. II.—Obligations of patients to their physicians.

₹ 1. The members of the medical profession, upon whom is enjoined the performance of so many important and arduous duties toward the community, and who are required to make so many sacrifices of comfort, ease and health, for the welfare of those who avail themselves of their services, certainly have a right to expect and require that their patients should entertain a just sense of the duties which they owe to their medical attendants.

 arities of constitution, habits and predispositions of those he attends, is more likely to be successful in his treatment than one who does not possess that knowledge.

A patient who has thus selected his physician should always apply for advice in what may appear to him trivial cases, for the most fatal results often supervene on the slightest accidents. It is of still more importance that he should apply for assistance in the forming stage of violent diseases; it is to a neglect of this precept that medicine owes much of the uncertainty and imperfection with which it has been reproached.

$\%\forall 4$. Patients should faithfully and unreservedly communicate to their physician the supposed cause of their disease. This is the more important, as many diseases of a mental origin simulate those depending on external causes and yet are only to be cured by ministering to the mind diseased. A patient should never be afraid of thus making his physician his friend and adviser; he should always bear in mind that a medical man is under the strongest obligations of secrecy. Even the female sex should never allow feelings of shame or delicacy to prevent their disclosing the seat, symptoms and causes of complaints peculiar to them. However commendable a modest reserve may be in the common occurrences of life, its strict observance in medicine is often attended with the most serious consequences, and a patient may sink under a painful and loathsome disease, which might have been readily prevented had timely intimation been given to the physician.

% 5. A patient should never weary his physician with a tedious detail of events or matters not appertaining to his disease. Even as relates to his actual symptoms, he will convey much more real information by giving clear answers to interrogatories, than by the most minute account of his own framing. Neither should he obtrude upon his physician the details of his business nor the history of his family concerns.

% 6. The obedience of a patient to the prescriptions of his physician should be prompt and implicit. He should never permit his own crude opinions as to their fitness to influence his attention to them. A failure in one particular may render an otherwise judicious treatment dangerious, and even fatal. This remark is equally applicable to diet, drink and exercise. As patients become convalescent they are very apt to suppose that the rules prescribed for them may be disregarded, and the consequence, but too often, is a relapse. Patients should never allow themselves to be persuaded to take any medicine whatever that may be recommended to them by the self-constituted doctors and doctoresses who are so frequently met with, and who pretend to possess infallible remedies for the cure of every disease. However simple some of their prescriptions may appear to be, it often happens that they are productive of much mischief, and in all eases they are injurious, by contravening the plan of treatment adopted by the physician.

7. A patient should, if possible, avoid even the friendly visits of a physician who is not attending him—and when he does receive them, he should never converse on the subject of his disease, as an observation may be made, without any intention of interference, which may destroy his confidence in the course he is pursuing, and induce him to neglect the directions prescribed to him. A patient should never send for a consulting physician without the express consent of his own medical attendant. It is of great importance that physicians should act in concert; for although their modes of treatment may be attended with equal success when applied singly, yet conjointly they are very likely to be productive of disastrous results.

& 8. When a patient wishes to dismiss his physician, justice and common courtesy require that he should declare his reasons for so doing.

§ 9. Patients should always, when practicable, send for their physician in the morning, before his usual hour of going out; for, by being early aware of the visits he has to pay during the day, the physician is able to apportion his time in such a manner as to prevent an interference of engagements. Patients should also avoid calling on their medical adviser unnecessarily during the homs devoted to meals or sleep. They should always be in readiness to receive the visits of their physician, as the detention of a few minutes is often of serious inconvenience to him.

§ 10. A patient should after his recovery, entertain a just and endearing sense of the value of the services rendered him by his physician; for these are of such a character, that no mere pecuniary acknowledge ordered.

OF THE DUTIES OF PHYSICIANS TO EACH OTHER, AND TO THE PROFESSION AT LARGE.

Article 1.—Duties for the Support of Professional Character.

ular system of medicine.

§ 3. There is no profession from the members of which geater purity of character and a higher standard of moral excellence are required, than the medical; and to attain such eminence is a duty every physician owes alike to his profession and to his patients. It is due to the latter, as without it he can not command their respect and confidence, and to both, because no scientific attainments can compensate for the want of correct moral principles. It is also incumbent upon the faculty to be temperate in all things, for the practice of physics requires the unremitting exercise of a clear and vigorous understanding; and on emergencies, for which no professional man should be unprepared, a steady hand, an acute eye and an unclouded head may be essential to the well-being, and even to the life, of a fellow-creature.

& 4. It is derogatory to the dignity of the profession to resort to public advertisements, or private cards, or handbills, inviting the attention of individuals affected with particular diseases—publicly offering advice and medicine to the poor gratis, or promising radical cures; or to publish cases and operations in the daily prints, or suffer such publications to be made; to invite laymen to be present at operations, to boast of cures and remedies; to adduce certificates of skill and success, or to perform any other similar acts. These are the ordinary practices of empirics, and are highly reprehensible in a regular physician.

2.5. Equally derogatory to professional character is it for a physician to hold a patent for any surgical instrument or medicine, or to dispense a secret nostrum, whether it be the composition or exclusive property of himself or of others. For, if such nostrum be of real efficacy, any concealment regarding it is inconsistent with beneficence and professional liberality; and if mystery alone give it value and importance, such craft implies either disgraceful ignorance or fraudulent avarice. It is also reprehensible for physicians to give certificates attesting the efficacy of patent or secret medicines, or in any way to promote the use of them.

ART. II.—Professional services of physicians to each other.

% 1. All practitioners of medicine, their wives, and their children while under the paternal care, are entitled to the gratuitous services of any one or more of the faculty residing near them, whose assistance may be desired. A physician afflicted with disease is usually an incompetent judge of his own case; and the natural anxiety and solicitude which he experiences at the sickness of a wife, a child, or any one who, by the ties of consanguinity, is rendered peculiarly dear to him, tend to obscure his judgment and produce timidity and irresolution in his practice. Under such circumstances, medical men are peculiarly dependent npon each other, and kind offices and professional aid should always be cheerfully and gratuitonsly afforded. Visits ought not, however, to be obtruded officiously; as such unasked civility may give rise to embarrassment, or interfere with that choice on which confidence depends. But if a distant member of the faculty, whose circumstances are affluent, request attendance, and an honorarium be offered, it should not be declined; for no pecuniary obligation ought to be imposed which the party receiving it would wish not to incur.

ART. III.—Of the duties of physicians as respects vicarious offices.

% 1. The affairs of life, the pursuit of health, and the various accidents and contingencies to which a medical man is peculiarly exposed, sometimes require him temporarily to withdraw from his duties to his patients, and to request some of his professional brethren to officiate for him. Compliance with this request is an act of courtesy which should always be performed with the utmost consideration for the interest and character of the family physician, and when exercised for a short period all the pecuniary obligations for such services should be awarded to him. But if a member of the profession neglect his business in quest of pleasure and ammsement, he can not be considered as entitled to the advantages of the frequent and long continued exercise of this fraternal courtesy, without awarding to the physician who officiates the fees arising from the discharge of his professional duties.

In obstetrical and important surgical cases, which give rise to unusual fatigue, anxiety and responsibility, it is just that the fees accruing therefrom should be awarded to the physician who officiates.

ART. IV.—Of the duties of physicians in regard to consultations.

1. A regular medical education furnishes the only presumptive evidence of professional abilities and acquirements, and ought to be the only acknowledged right of an individual to the exercise and honors of his profession. Nevertheless, as in consultations the good of the patient is the sole object in view, and this is often dependent on personal confidence, no intelligent regular practitioner, who has a license to practice from some medical board of known and acknowledged respectability, recognized by the Association, and who is in good moral and professional standing in the place in which he resides, should be fastidiously excluded from fellowship, or his aid refused in consultation, when it is requested by the patient. But no one can be considered as a regular practitioner or a fit associate in consultation whose practice is based on an exclusive dogma, to the rejection of the accumulated experience of the profession, and of the aids actually furnished by anatomy, physiology, pathology and organic chemistry.

« 2. In consultations no rivalship or jealousy should be indulged; candor, probity and all due respect should be exercised toward the physician having charge of the case.

% 3. In consultations the attending physician should be the first to propose the necessary questions to the sick; after which the consulting physician should have the opportunity to make such further inquiries of the patient as may be necessary to satisfy him of the true character of the case. Both physicians should then retire to a private place for deliberation; and the one first in attendance should communicate the directions agreed upon to the patient or his friends, as well as any opinion which it may be thought proper to express. But no statement or discussion of it should take place before the patient or his friends, except in the presence of all the faculty attending, and by their common consent; and no opinions or prognostications should be delivered which are not the result of previous deliberation and concurrence.

¾ 4. In consultations, the physician in attendance should deliver his opinion first; and when there are several consulting, they should deliver their opinions in the order in which they have been called. No decision, however, should restrain the attending physician from making such variations in the mode of treatment as any subsequent unexpected change in the character of the case may demand. But such variation, and the reasons for it, ought to be carefully detailed at the next meeting in consultation. The same privilege belongs also to the consulting physician if he is sent for in an emergency, when the regular attendant is out of the way, and similar explanations must be made by him at the next consultation.

§ 5. The utmost punctuality should be observed in the visits of physicians when they are to hold consultations together, and this is generally practicable, for society has been considerate enough to allow the plea of a professional engagement to take precedence of all others, and to be an ample reason for the relinquishment of any present occupation. But as professional engagements may sometimes interfere and delay one of the parties, the physician who first arrives should wait for his associate a reasonable period, after which the consultation should be considered as postponed to a new appointment. If it be the attending physician who is present, he will, of course, see the patient and prescribe; but if it be the consulting one, he should retire, except in case of emergency, or when he has been called from a considerable distance, in which latter case he may examine the patient, and give his opinion in writing and under seal, to be delivered to his associate.

 ment in those modes of practice which are founded, not on hypothesis, but on experience and observation.

% 7. All discussions in consultation should be held as secret and confidential. Neither by words nor manner should any of the parties to a consultation assert or insinuate that any part of the treatment pursued did not receive his assent. The responsibility must be equally divided between the medical attendants—they must equally share the credit of success as well as the blame of failure.

& S. Should an irreconcilable diversity of opinion occur when several physicians are called upon to consult together, the opinion of the majority should be considered as decisive; but if the numbers be equal on each side, then the decision should rest with the attending physician. It may, moreover, sometimes happen that two physicians can not agree in their views of the nature of a case and the treatment to be pursued. This is a circumstance much to be deplored, and should always be avoided, if possible, by mutual concessions, as far as they can be justified by a conscientious regard for the dictates of judgment. But in the event of its occurrence, a third physician should, if practicable, be called to act as umpire; and, if circumstances prevent the adoption of this course, it must be left to the patient to select the physician in whom he is most willing to confide. But, as every physician relies upon the recitude of his judgment, he should, when left in the minority, politely and consistently retire from any further deliberation in the consultation, or participation in the management of the case.

2.9. As circumstances sometimes occur to render a special consultation desirable, when the continued attendance of two physicians might be objectionable to the patient, the member of the faculty whose assistance is required in such cases should sedulously guard against all future unsolicited attendance. As such consultations require an extraordinary portion of both time and attention, at least a double honorarium may be reasonably expected.

% 10. A physician who is called upon to consult, should observe the most honorable and scrupulous regard for the character and standing of the practitioner in attendance; the practice of the latter, if necessary, should be justified as far as can be, consistently with a conscientious regard for truth, and no hint or insinuation should be thrown out which could impair the confidence reposed in him, or affect his reputation. The consulting physician should also carefully refrain from any of those extraordinary attentions or assiduities which are too often practiced by the dishonest for the base purpose of gaining applause, or ingratiating themselves into the favor of families and individuals.

ART. V.—Duties of physicians in cases of interference.

1. Medicine is a liberal profession, and those admitted into its ranks should found their expectations of practice upon the extent of their qualifications, not on intrigue or artifice.

 Indeed, such visits should be avoided, except under peculiar circumstances; and when they are made, no particular inquiries should be instituted relative to the nature of the disease, or the remedies employed, but the topics of conversation should be as foreign to the case as circumstances will admit.

% 4. A physician ought not to take charge of or prescribe for a patient who has recently been under the care of another member of the faculty in the same illness, except in cases of sudden emergency, or in consultation with the physician previously in attendance, or when the latter has relinquished the case, or been regularly notified that his services are no longer desired. Under such circumstances, no unjust and illiberal insinuations should be thrown out in relation to the conduct or practice previously pursued, which should be justified as far as candor and regard for truth and probity will permit; for it often happens that patients become dissatisfied when they do not experience immediate relief, and, as many diseases are naturally protracted, the want of success, in the first stage of treatment, affords no evidence of a lack of professional knowledge and skill.

8 5. When a physician is called to an urgent case, because the family attendant is not at hand, he ought, unless his assistance in consultation be desired, to resign the care of the patient to the latter immediate.

ately on his arrival.

¿ 6. It often happens in case of sudden illness, or of recent accidents and injuries, owing to the alarm and anxiety of friends, that a number of physicians are simultaneously sent for. Under these circumstances, courtesy should assign the patient to the first who arrives, who should select from those present any additional assistance that he may deem necessary. In all such cases, however, the practitioner who officiates should request the family physician, if there be one, to be called, and, unless his further attendance be requested, should resign the case to the latter on his arrival.

patient, to surrender the case.

(The expression, "patient of another practitioner," is understood to mean a patient who may have been under the charge of another practitioner at the time of the attack of sickness, or departure from home of the latter, or who may have called for his attendance during his absence or sickness, or in any other manner given it to be understood that he regarded the said physician as his regular medical attendant.)

2.8. A physician, when visiting a sick person in the country, may be desired to see a neighboring patient who is under the regular direction of another physician, in consequence of some sudden change or aggravation of symptoms. The conduct to be pursued on such an occasion is to give advice adapted to present circumstances; to interfere no further than is absolutely necessary with the general plan of treatment; to assume no future direction unless it be expressly desired; and, in this last ease, to request an immediate consultation with the practitioner previously employed.

& 9. A wealthy physician should not give advice gratis to the affluent; because his doing so is an injury to his professional brethren. The office of a physician can never be supported as an exclusively beneficent one; and it is defrauding, in some degree, the common funds for its support, when fees are dispensed with which might justly be claimed.

10. When a physician who has been engaged to attend a case of midwifery is absent, another is sent for; if delivery is accomplished during the attendance of the latter, he is entitled to fee, but should resign the patient to the practitioner first engaged.

Arr. VI.—Of differences between physicians.

1. Diversity of opinion and opposition of interest may, in the medical as in other professions, sometimes occasion controversy and even contention. Whenever such cases unfortunately occur and can not be immediately terminated, they should be referred to the arbitra tion of a sufficient number of physicians or a court-medical.

ART. VII. - Of pecuniary acknowledgments.

Some general rules should be adopted by the faculty, in every town or district, relative to pecuniary acknowledgments from their patients; and it should be deemed a point of honor to adhere to these rules with as much uniformity as varying circumstances will admit.

OF THE DUTIES OF THE PROFESSION TO THE PUBLIC, AND OF THE OBLIGATIONS OF THE PUBLIC TO THE PROFESSION.

ARTICLE I .- Duties of the Profession to the Public.

2. Medical men should also be always ready, when called on by the legally constituted authorities, to enlighten coroners' inquests and courts of justice on subjects strictly medical—such as involve questions relating to sanity, legitimacy, murder by poison or other violent means, and in regard to the various other subjects embraced in the science of Medical Jurisprudence. But in these cases, and especially where they are required to make a post-mortem examination, it is just, in consequence of the time, labor and skill required, and the responsibility and risk they incur, that the public should award them a proper honorarum.

§ 3. There is no profession by the members of which eleemosynary services are more liberally dispensed than the medical, but justice requires that some limits shuld be placed to the performance of such good offices. Poverty, professional brotherhood, and certain of the public duties referred to in the first section of this article, should always be recognized as presenting valid claims for gratuitous services; but neither institutions endowed by the public or by rich individuals, societies for mutual benefit, for the insurance of lives or for analogous purposes, nor any profession or occupation, can be admitted to possess such privilege. Nor can it be justly expected of physicians to furnish certificates of inability to serve on juries, to perform militia duty, or to testify to the state of health of persons wishing to insure their lives, obtain pensions, or the like, without a pecuniary acknowledgment. But to individuals in indigent circumstances, such professional services should always be cheerfully and freely accorded.

4. It is the duty of physicians, who are frequent witnesses of the enormities committed by quackery, and the injury to health and even destruction of life caused by the use of quack medicines, to enlighten the public on these subjects, to expose the injuries sustained by the unwary from the devices and pretensions of artful empiries and impostors. Physicians ought to use all the influence which they may possess, as professors in Colleges of Pharmacy, and by exercising their option in regard to the shops to which their prescriptions shall be sent, to discourage druggists and apothecaries from vending quack or secret medicines, or from being in any way engaged in their manufacture and sale.

ART. II.—Obligations of the public to physicians.

1. The benefits accrning to the public, directly and indirectly, from the active and unwearied beneficence of the profession, are so numerous and important that physicians are justly entitled to the utmost consideration and respect from the community. The public ought likewise to entertain a just appreciation of medical qualifications; to make a proper discrimination between true science and the assumptions of ignorance and empiricism; to afford every encouragement and facility for the acquisition of medical education—and no longer to allow the statute books to exhibit the anomaly of exacting knowledge from physicians, under a liability to heavy penalties, and of making them obnoxious to punishment for resorting to the only means of obtaining it.

EXPLANATORY DECLARATIONS.

WHEREAS, Persistent misrepresentations have been and still are being made concerning certain provisions of the Code of Ethies of this Association, by which many in the community, and some in the ranks of the profession, are led to believe those provisions exclude persons from professional recognition simply because of differences of opinions or doctrines; therefore,

1. Resolved, That clause first, of Art. IV, in the National Code of Medical Ethics, is not to be interpreted as excluding from professional fellowship, on the ground of differences in doctrine or belief, those who in other respects are entitled to be members of the regular medical profession. Neither is there any other article or clause of the said Code of Ethics that interferes with the exercise of the most perfect liberty of individual opinion and practice.

- 2. Resolved, That it constitutes a voluntary disconnection or withdrawal from the medical profession proper, to assume a name indicating to the public a sectarian, or exclusive system of practice, or to belong to an association or party antagonistic to the general medical profession.
- 3. Resolved, That there is no provision in the National Code of Medical Ethics in any wise inconsistent with the broadest dictates of humanity, and that the article of the Code which relates to consultations can not be correctly interpreted as interdicting, under any circumstances, the rendering of professional services whenever there is a pressing or immediate need of them. On the contrary, to meet the emergencies occasioned by disease or accident, and to give a helping hand to the distressed without unnecessary delay, is a duty fully enjoined on every member of the profession, both by the letter and spirit of the entire Code.

But no such emergencies or circumstances can make it necessary or proper to enter into formal professional consultations with those who have voluntarily disconnected themselves from the regular medical profession, in the manner indicated by the preceding resolution.
